- NATO: Preparing for the Madrid Summit. by Dr. Javier Solana, NATO Secretary General. "La Revista de Defensa," Mar. 6, 1997. See NATO INTERNET site; extract: "Europe is going through a crucial period - every bit as formative as the formative years which shaped Europe in the 1940s and early 1950s. The signs are very positive that we will succeed in making Europe a safer, more stable place than it has been in this century. There is good reason to be optimistic... there can be no doubt that NATO occupies a central place in the emerging new European architecture. Indeed, at the NATO Madrid Summit in July NATO will make a further major contribution to European security as a whole ... Fourth (goal of Madrid), the Alliance will also develop further its relations with Ukraine. An independent, stable and democratic Ukraine is of strategic importance for the development of Europe as a whole. The Alliance is committed to the development of a "distinctive and effective NATO-Ukraine relationship" which could also be formalized, possibly by the time of the Summit.
